General Terms and Conditions

- Delivery usually can be made within 3 weeks following the receipt of the order.
- The cultures are clonal, unialgal, but many of them are not axenic (i.e. they may contain bacteria or fungi). Please inform us if you require axenic cultures, using the note form below.
- In ordering a strain from the CAUP, the customer agrees not to resell, lend or redistribute the material to others, and to quote the collection acronym (CAUP) and the strain number in publications involving the strain.
- All recipients of cultures are kindly asked to send in return reprints or PDF files of their publications when strains from the CAUP have been used.
- We are not quantifying the number of organisms or cells in the culture, but will not ship cultures that are not dense enough to prepare inocula. We cannot guarantee that the cultures show specific characteristics.
- Recipient understands that the strains are supplied "as is" and are provided without warranty of fitness for a particular purpose or any other warranty, expressed or implied. Recipients are aware that the strains are materials of experimental nature which are subject to influences beyond the control of CAUP. CAUP therefore is only liable for the quality of material defined above. Furthermore, CAUP does not assume any warranty for the durability of the material. Recipient assumes all liability from use, storage or disposal of the strains and agrees to not hold CAUP liable for any resulting consequences. CAUP does not assume any liability against claims of third parties from environment, product or producer liability or other liability arising from the strains.

I agree with CAUP's policies of ordering CAUP cultures, the charges for cultures and delivery.
